Time: 3 Hours

Max. Marks : 100

Instructions:

1. Attempt all questions.
2. Figures to right indicate full marks.
3. Draw neat sketches wherever necessary.

Q1. An automobile manufacturing company is facing the issue of disagreement with its channel partners (dealers) involved into selling of its cars to the end users. The disagreement is in latent stage and has not reached the stage where it requires third-party intervention. Which type of conflict is this? What method(s) are available with the channel sales manager that can be used to solve this conflict? Being the channel sales manager, management has instructed you to identify new distribution channels for proposed launch of new category of vehicles. You are required to design the channel and the structure along with management policy for the same. [20]

Q2. A leading detergent brand selling in urban and rural areas face challenges in terms of differing sales and distribution strategies. Do you agree with this statement? Justify your answer. Elaborate how supply chain management, sourcing, channel partnerships are different for urban and rural markets for the detergent brand and how retailing in the rural and urban counterparts varies for the mentioned product category? [20]

Q3. Select a product of your choice. For the selected product, what are the different sales presentation methods available when you are explaining the product to the prospective customer. Compare and explain the benefits of these sales presentation methods. Also explain the methods used for handling buyers' objections. How would you handle if a buyer feels that the price of the product (from your selected category) is high and he can't afford it? [20]

Q4. A company want to control its sales force performance on both selling and non-selling activities. The major factors contributing to the selling performance are sales volume (in Rupees) and average number of sales calls per day. The major non-selling factor is the payment collections from customers. Design a suitable sales quota system and show it with an example. You may make suitable assumptions. [20]

Q5. If you are an area sales manager, how would you help the following sales people in achieving their targets? What motivation you can provide to these sales people?

- a. A high performing salesperson, whose morale is down because he did not get an expected promotion as a marketing executive, although he has been consistently exceeding his sales target (or quotas) for the past four years. The main responsibility of marketing executives are selling to a few key accounts, and coaching some sales trainees on the job [10]
- b. An older salesperson whose performance has been below expectation for the past few years, although he had performed well in the past. He seems to have lost enthusiasm although he has developed excellent relationship with a few key accounts, from whom the company gets good sales volume [10]
